SUIT OVER MILLLIONS WASTED ON CANTONMENTS

FIRST LADIES NIGHT AT CUMBERLAND IS BIG SUCCESS

Hugh Stephens of Knoxville Gives 1923 Prediction and Dr. J. W. Porter, Louisville, Speaks On Women.

KIWANIS CLUB TO TAKE UP FOOTBALL GAME TICKET SALE

One hundred and twenty-five persons attended the first Kiwanis Ladies' Night in the Hotel Cumberland last night and reported it one of the most enjoyable ladies' night ever held, E. P. Nicholson was chairman of the evening and an entertaining program was provided

Several important business matters preceded the program. The immediate sale of the boxes for the Thanksgiving football game was urged and a committee to sell them and advertise the game was appointed, composed of J. R. Ramey, C. G. Smyth, I. B. Dickey, Jack Inman and T R. Hill. Announcement of the Salvation Army drive to start December 4 was made. Dr. J. A. Gray proposed a resolution to invite Clemenceau here to speak and, the club endorsing it, Judge J. F. Bosworth was appointed to issue the invitation.

Hugh Stephens of Knoxville drew the attendance prize and the ladies' prizes were awarded as follows: 1. Mrs. Lelia McKay, given by Dr. L. L Robertson; 2. Miss Mildred Kerr, by Dr. C. K. Brosheer; 3. Miss Della Richards, by Dr. Jacob Schultz; 4. Miss Henrietta Gordon, by Dr. J. E. Edmonds; 5. Miss Jesse Buchanan, by Dr. U. G. Brummett; 6. Mrs. T. D Vankirk, by Dr. T. H. Curd; 7. Miss Ethel Yarber, by Dr. T. T. Gibson; 8 Mrs. G. C. Woodson, by Dr. O. O. Stone; 9. Mrs. O. O. Stone, by Dr. T. D. Vankirk; 10. Mrs. G. H. Talbott, by Dr. E. L. Camp.

The Kiwanis quartet, composed of O. G. Smyth, T. R. Hill, W. P. Rash and I. B. Dickey, sang two selections and the rest of the program was taken up by the two talks of the evening.

The first speaker was Hugh Stephens, vice-president of the Bankers Trust Co. of Knoxville and he spoke on what 1923 has in store for this country. He cited the unbalanced conditions, industrial, political and international and gave little hope for an immediate return to good times. He said that permanent prosperity, he thought, could not return with farm prices so low and labor so high and until a reconciliation of these were made business would be unsettled, as they are the factors on which the country depends. He said that there might be a boom in the spring but that he expected a deflation before the end of the year, and he advised investors to stick to securities and stable investments during the year.

Dr. J. W Porter of Louisville was last on the program and his subject was "Our Wives, Our Sweethearts, Our Mothers." Dr. Porter is a witty and versatile speaker and he kept the entire room laughing most of the time. His quick thrusts and rapid wit have made him one of the most popular speakers the Kiwanians ever had. He spoke here last Thursday and Mr. Nicholson persuaded him to come back especially for the dinner last night.

RED CROSS BUDGET IS TWENTY MILLION FOR COMING YEAR

To Be Divided Between National Organization And Active Chapters On Equal Basis — Relief Work Stressed.

LOCAL FUNDS GO LARGELY FOR HEALTH WORK

By Associated Press

Washington, Nov. 24.—Twenty million dollars is the estimate of the American Red Cross for the fiscal year. Officers said this would be divided between the national organization and the active chapters on approximately an equal basis.

Budget allotments of the national organization for operations aggregate $6,335,795, or $488,015 less than similar expenditures for last year, while the allotment for foreign operations will be $3,404,077, about $2,247,959 less than the year before. It was stated that the reduction in the cost of domestic operations represented a saving in overhead expenses and decreased personnel through the combining of divisional units. The foreign operations, with the exception of the Junior American Red Cross, practically were terminated last July.

Relief work for disabled former service men and their dependents remains the main obligation which the Red Cross is meeting in funds and service. Approximately $3,000,000 of the domestic budget is set apart for soldier service, this representing an increase of $366,000 over last year.

Other outstanding domestic items in the 1922-1923 budget, are; for disaster relief, $750,000; for emergencies in chapter work, $500,000; for service and assistance to chapters and to their branches, $1,293,000; for assistance to other organizations educational institutions that train Red Cross nurses and workers, $200,000, for Roll Call assistance furnished to chapters, $100,000; for unforseen contingencies, $100,000.

Less than $500,000 is set aside for management of the national organization The ration of management expenses to the expenditures last year was placed at five and two-tenths per cent, officers said the ration this year probably would fall below five per cent.

The child health program in Europe and medical and hospital supplies for Russia represent more than two-thirds of the entire foreign allotment. The child health program will get $641,314, but this is the balance of funds contributed to the American Red Cross specificially for this purpose. The $1,884,044 for Russian supplies is the balance of funds made available by the Red Cross for medical and hospitol relief in the famine stricken areas of that country, and this money is expended under the direction of the American Relief Administration.

"The Red Cross must depend chiefly upon its volunteer membership for financial support and service," said the budget announcement. "In its appeal for the maintenance of strength thru a full enrollment during the annual Roll Call campaign, from Armistice to Thanksgiving, the American Red Cross presents in its annual financial statement its evidence of unlimited work in the service of all mankind at the lowest cost commensurate with adequate standards."

COAL PRODUCTION IN THIS SECTION LEAST IN WHOLE COUNTRY

Geological Survey Shows Harlan and Southern Appalachian Districts Working Less Than Any Other Districts.

AVERAGE CAR SUPPLY GIVES ONLY DAY A WEEK HERE

The United States Geological Survey has compiled a table of the percentage of full-time output of coal produced in the United States by all bituminous operators, and this table shows that the Harlan, Hazard and Middlesboro fields have practically the smallest percentage of the lot. The Kanawha field has a slightly lower percentage.

This table shows for November 4 a percentage of 20.9 for Hazard, 16.1 for Harlan and 23.2 for the Southern Appalachian and Kentucky-Tennessee district This is a little less than one day a week for Harlan and a little more than that for the other fields. Harlan has not had over one day a week work for months and only the mines in this section which are served by the Southern Railway are working more than one day a week. The number of days is, of course, controlled by the car supply, as the mine facilities and labor supply warrants 100 per cent production.

In contrast to these figures are shown Alabama fields with 81.7 production, Pennsylvania with any where from 50 to 70 per cent, and the fields to the north and west nearly all averaging more than 50 per cent. Some of the figures presented for the week ending November 4 follow:

Illinois, 52 per cent; Indiana, 50.3; Southern Ohio, 37.6; northern and central Ohio, 37.7; Pittsburgh rail mines, 39.4; Pittsburgh combination rail and river mines, 72.4; Westmoreland, 64.5; Central Pennsylvania, 70.6; Somerset county, Pennsylvania, 51.5; West Virginia, Panhandle, 54.8, Fairmont, 41.9; Winding Gulf, 31.6; New River, 34.7; Pocahontas, 33; Tug River, 37.8; Kanawha, 14.8; Logan, 30.7; Kenova-Thacke, 51; Northeastern Kentucky, 29.9; Western Kentucky, 38; Hazard, 20.9; Harlan, 16.4; Kentucky-Tennessee and Southern Appalachian, 23.2; Virginia, 62.3; Alabama, 81.7; Iowa, 77.8; Kansas, 43.7; Missouri, 77.1; Oklahoma, 71.5; Arkansas, 34.2; Texas, 71.7; Colorado, 53.5; Utah, 54.4; New Mexico, 76.9; Montana, 69.8; Wyoming, 66.6; Wash-

GRATEFUL FOR CLOTHING SENT

State Near East Relief Director Thanks Middlesboro Red Cross For Contributions.

W. S. Anderson, chairman of the local chapter of the Red Cross, received a letter this morning from Miss Beth Higgins, state director of the Near East Relief work, thanking Middlesboro for the clothing for the destitute of Smyrna. The women of Middlesboro contributed two cases of 329 garments to the Thanksgiving shipment from Kentucky Miss Higgins will be remembered by many Middlesboro people as she was here a year ago in the interest of the Armenian drive for 1200 pounds of clothing.

The letter follows:

W. S. Anderson, Chairman,
and Good Friends:

If you could see the gratitude in the faces of the little children in the Near East which your generosity makes possible to live, it would not be necessary or me to send you a word of thanks. Our returned personnel tell us that the most pathetic thing in the Near East is the gratitude of the children for what America is doing.

Many people say to me as I go throughout Kentucky that it seems like pouring money into a bottomless pit to give to the Armenians who are constantly suffering at the hands of the Turks. And it does seem so over here but if you were over there it would be different. It is a bottomless pit of misery, suffering and despair, but putting your money in it is like letting down a strong rope and out of it you see coming a woman, perhaps a mother or a grandmother, and the children with their trusting eyes.

A million people have been saved because America cared. Two hundred thousand children realize that America saved them from death. America is building a cathedral of the blood and flesh of little Christian children, orphaned by the relentless hand of the Turk. If we were to turn them out now, it would be better that we shoot them because they would have nowhere to go and no one to care what became of them. They are being taught trades and professions and in time will be men and women of whom you can be justly proud.

May your generosity be rewarded with a peace that knoweth no understanding.

Gratefully yours,
BETH HIGGINS,

DEAF MUTE ONLY WITNESS AGAINST FATHER IN MURDER

Prosecutors Depend On Boy To Testify That Parent Killed Two Sisters At Home Near Kansas City.

GIRLS' BODIES HACKED TO PIECES FOUND IN SACKS

Kansas City, Kas, Nov. 24.—On the fingers of 14-year-old Albert Dinella rests the fate of his father, Antonio, who is awaiting trial here for the death of his two daughters.

For from these fingers will be made known the result of a test of strength between love of parent and grief over the loss of a life-long helper and companion, according to prosecuting officials

When the case comes up in Wyandotte county district court here, in the term opening December 4, the tale of a harrowing double murder is expected to come from these fingers. For Albert can neither speak nor hear, and it is on the sight language of the deaf mute boy that authorities will depend for the conviction—or acquittal—of his father.

What secret do these fingers hold?

Will the boy be his father's Nemesis or will he save his father from the gallows?

Prosecuting attorneys and police believe the boy will be a favorable witness for the prosecution if he knows his father is guilty. For they point to the fact that Albert's life-long and most cherished playmate was one of the victims for whose death Antonio Dinella will be tried.

Helen, twin sister of Albert, had been the voice and ears of her brother—until one day last September when her body, hacked and mutilated almost beyond recognition was found in a sack on a bank of the Kaw River. Only two days before, the headless body of their younger sister, Florence had been picked up by police under similar circumstances.

Find Evidence

Investigation by authorities led them to the crude shack of the children's father on the bank of Kaw River near where it empties into the Missouri in the heart of Kansas City, Kas. They searched the home and came out, they say, with a blood-stained hammer and some gunny sacks, like those in which the girls' bodies had been found. After questioning their father they arrested him and are holding him for trial on a charge of murder.

But the chief testimony in the case, police say, they have not yet gathered That lies with Albert, the deaf-mute brother of the murdered girls.

Prosecutors point to the close affection between the boys and his twin sister, Helen, to substantiate their belief that he will prove a damaging witness against his father. Not only he and Helen played together all their lives, but the girl had learned to know and interpret Albert's thoughts in a way that he, without hearing and without speech, could not express them.

Boy Feels Loss

Now, without this help. Albert finds himself more handicapped than ever in his relations with his playmates. He knows the sign language, but his friends do not. He has never learned to write like other boys of his age, and it has been only through concentrated effort that he has picked up knowledge enough to print in crude letters words which he thinks.

Police believe the thought of this handicap and the memories of sister's help and companionship will lead the boy to stand witness against his father if he knows anything which points to his father as the murderer.

Yet, from Albert alone, no satisfaction either way can be gained. Barefoot, even in these chilly November days, he plays along the banks of the Kaw, unmindful of the important part he will take in the destiny of his father.

TIGER OF FRANCE LASHES BACK AT SENATE CRITICS

Clemenceau Answers Hitchcock, Denying Any Black Troop in Germany—Says Borah's Criticism Opposite That in France.

DARES HITCHCOCK GO TO FRANCE AND LEARN FACTS

By Associated Press

BOSTON, Nov 24.—Clemenceau, the Tiger of France, lashed back at his Senate critics today in his first American interview granted to the Associated Press, replying particularly to the criticism of Senators Hitchcock and Borah. Answering Hitchcock's demand that he explain why France insisted on using black troops in her army of occupation, the Tiger declared Hitchcock was misled by German propaganda and today there is not a single black soldier in German territory. "I dare him go to France and learn the facts," he said with reference to the fact that Clemenceau had been called a militarist

When the Tiger came to Borah's statement that Clemenceau was responsible for most of Europe's woes because of the Treaty of Versailles, the Tiger said the criticism was exactly the opposite in his own country where he was assailed for not demanding enough

CLEMENCEAU IS VERY HUMAN MAN

Former Premier, "Tiger of France," Enjoys Joke at Friend's Expense.

By Lowell Mellett

Washington, Nov. 24.—United States folks are going to be tickled tremendously by Georges Clemenceau. He's a real character. Everything you've read about him is true—or very well could be

Take that jug story they tell of Clemenceau. While premier of France, he used to get up early in the morning. He didn't like to stir his ancient woman servant out of bed at the hour he considered suitable for himself, so he hit upon this scheme for his breakfast. He had her prepare him a jug of hot soup before he went to bed, then he used this hot jug in the same way some of us used to use a hot brick on cold winter nights, the way many good ladies use hot water bottles now—to keep his feet warm.

Next morning he rescued the jug from under the blankets and there was his soup for breakfast.

Like Peasant.

The first time I ever saw the Tiger was on a drizzly morning in the middle of a barn lot near La Fertesur-Juare, not far from the River Marne This barn lot, with the stable and cow sheds surrounding it, formed the headquarters of the Second Division. Clemenceau had arrived to congratulate the doughboys and their officers for having stopped the German push toward Paris.

He might have been the peasant owner of the farm, come over to see that the doughboys were not mussing up the proud manure pile which dominated the scenery of the barn lot.

Same Old Kelly

Another time I saw him under very different circumstances. It was in the anteroom of the foreign office on the Quai d'Orsay, at the end of the first plenary session of the peace conference Present were Woodrow Wilson, Arthur Balfour, Clemenceau and a few of us minor characters.

Balfour was being helped by an attendent to his hat, a nice new and very shiny toper.

"Nice hat you got, Balfour," said Clemenceau.

Balfour blushed and replied:

"Yes, my secretary thought I ought to wear a new hat today."

"So did mine," replied Cnemenceau, jamming over his ears the same battered old felt Kelly that he had worn that day on the Marne—or one equal-

DECIDE NEXT STEP IN CAMPAIGN ON ALLEGED FRAUDS

Charge of Gross Negligence, Inefficiency and Wastefulness by Defendant Contractors and Agents—$75,000,000 Probably Involved.

DOZEN OR MORE GOVERNMENT SUITS IN PROSPECT

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Search suits for recovery of money expended for construction of war cantonments was decided upon as the next step in the government's campaign against the alleged frauds under war contracts. The number of suits is not definitely decided upon but a dozen or more are in prospect. Initial cases are expected to involve the construction of Camp Upton, Yaphank, N. Y. Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. C., Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, Ohio, and Camp Funston, Fort Riley, Kansas.

Officials indicated that the whole series of suits when complete would present one of the most sweeping and far-reaching prosecutions ever instituted in the name of the Federal government. The construction of the four camps named involved the expenditure of more than fifty-two million dollars. The bill complaints in reference to these camps charge gross negligence, inefficiency and wastefulness on the part of defendant contractors and their agents.

Unofficial estimates place the total sum to be sought in all suits at seventy-five million. In one camp costing thirteen million, auditors are said to have found indications of excess expenditures of five million.

THE BAN ON THE BIBLE

Dispatches have told the story of a decision by a court in California that the King James version of the Bible is a sectarian book and therefore must be excluded from the public schools of the state. Exclusive of all other considerations the court addressed itself to the question of the "denominational" character of what is known as the authorized version. The court is quoted as having said with respect to the various translations of the scriptures that "each sect insists that its version is the only inspired book." And as a translation of a partisan character the court rules it is inadmissible in the schools.

Altogether aside from the question of the greater accuracy or fairness of this version or that, the King James, the Douay, the revised, there remains the lamentable fact that the decision may deprive the school children of one great state of acquaintance with the Bible which is a most valuable part of an education. Translators differ as to the meaning of the word "baptize" and scholars have argued over the matter at length. Students debate the question of Presbyter and Bishop. Many passages are susceptible of more than one interpretation. But all those things aside, these facts remain:

That the King James version is a translation of one of the world's great literatures, a literature which contains lyrics and epics, tragedies and histories, that no educated person can ignore any more than he can ignore the literatures of Greece and Rome. And this is true without respect to the spiritual content of this literature and its value as a revelation of the Deity.

Also the fact remains that the King James Version itself is a literary classic which has a first place in the history of the literature of the English tongue. It helped shape that tongue. It moulded the speech of the English colonizers of America. No single person who speaks English as his native language but had been influenced by the King James Bible. That version is one of the things that no educated person can overlook.—Boston Herald.

TOO MANY COAL MINES

Some of the coal mines in this and the Harlan fields must be shut down at least temporarily before the suffering in these fields can be alleviated is the opinion expressed by the president of District 19, U. M. W. How he proposes to shut them down is another matter.

It is very apparent that the present system in these coal fields is wrong. For months now the work which the car supply justified has not exceeded one, or at most, two days a week. The men get as high as $7.50 a day for this work, but that means $7.50 a week which is scarcely a living wage. The hardship for the operator is just as great or greater. He has to keep up his machinery and equipment for full time work when he does well to have the mine run 20 per cent of the time.

If some of the mines were closed, as Mr. Turnblazer suggests, the operators of these mines would be bound to suffer and the operators of those left running would be the gainers, so that it would be difficult to persuade any operator that his was the mine that should close.

Hundreds of miners have hung on there when they had no work, hoping all the time that they would soon leave. Even more were brought in during the strike so that this section is greatly over populated with miners. Even if all of the cars asked for could be supplied the mines could not run much more. Right now, in this country where the stock of coal was so seriously depleted by the long summer strike, the production of coal now exceeds the consumption by one million tons a week. Such a condition surely would not justify the employment of more miners.

The development of new industries to employ the great surplus of miners would, of course, solve the matter and many of the business men here feel that this is the only plausible course. Isn't this a matter that the Southern Appalachian or Kentucky-Tennessee association should take up? The matter is too critical to encourage the "watchful waiting" policy much longer.

STRANGE MR. YOU

We are strange nervous mechanisms, we humans, fearfully and wonderfully made. And here are three of the strangest things about us, caught in the far-flung net, today's news:

A young soldier, mentally wrecked by the shell-shock, was experimented on by doctors. Taken to a room where everything was a vivid red, he shrieked in agony. Then they led him to a primrose-yellow room. He sighed happily drifted to deep sleep. Kept in this room he rapidly recovered to normal.

E. T. Ballinger of New York tells this remarkable story of a convention of paint and varnish makers.

Ballinger says scientists have discovered that a room furnished in a dark color tends to cause melancholia and an aversion to work. A red room temporarily stimulates, then reacts in nervous headache. Blue induces calm. Green seems to impart happiness and vitality. Yellow makes people amiable, contented, soothed.

A good tip, when you redecorate the home. To avoid monotony, use combinations not one color alone.

The effect of color vibrations on our nerves is a mystery.

Railroad riding will be rougher as the weather gets colder, says Dr. Plimmon H. Dudley, weather expert for New York Central railroad.

He explains it this way: Winter cold makes the steel rails shrink in length a 150,000 of an inch for each degree the thermometer drops. To our delicate nerves, the riding seems very bumpy over the slightest gaps between the shrunken rails.

You think it wonderful that frost can shrink steel rails and make them crack. More wonderful is that we strange humans are more powerful than either cold or steel, both our slaves. Our mental and nerve powers, compared with animals' are little short of terrible.

In Western Electric laboratories, this is discovered: The human voice can be reduced to a millionth of its volume and still be heard. But the voice cannot be heard when reduced to a ten-millionth.

That is a remarkably fine distinction, the vanishing point of sound is so infinitesimally minute that the human brain cannot conceive of it.

Yet it holds good for all normal human ears, although no two people hear the same thing in exactly the same way.

When you ponder marvels, consider the delicacy of the human nerves that make all this possible.

What Does America Need

"Created Wants" Blamed.

Editor Daily News:—

"What is the matter with America," you ask. Here is one of the evils of our country which goes unsuspected.

It is our oft-boasted high standard of living.

Don't think I mean that a low standard, such as that of the Chinese, is ideal. There should be a happy medium.

Look about and compare our ways of living now with that of 20 years ago.

Today we demand as our right, automobiles, electric lights, expensive furniture, expensive clothes, cosmetics, high-speed transportation, motion pictures and other forms of amusements.

We have multiplied our channels for spending our money while the ways of earning money, producing wealth, have not increased in proportion. Millions must be left out in the cold to envy their more fortunate brothers. Such a condition has always existed, but never before has the envy part been so aroused.

Why? One reason is advertising.

The advertisements that appeal to those who can afford to satisfy their wants, also appeal and create desire in the minds of those who cannot supply them.

We have giant factories, employing millions, producing goods to supply Created Wants not natural wants.

Our "higher standard of living" means that we travel at such a pace that we have forgotten half the real joys of living. It means that our culture is dropping in proportion with the rise in our standard of living.

Isn't that one of the troubles with America?

SPEAKING OF ALTITUDE

By Berton Braley

We knew they'd be shorter
Before very long.
The fashion reporter,
We figured, was wrong,
Who said we'd be peeping
No longer at knees,
That skirts would be sweeping
The streets, if you please.

It may be in Paris,
Where fashions are made,
That shop girl and heiress
Alike will parade
In skirts that are flowing,
Whose draperies fall
So far that they're showing
No ankles at all.

But modes that check freedom
Don't get over, now.
Our women won't heed 'em
And most of them vow
Long skirts are a phony
French costumers' trick,
To hide ankles bony,
Or clumsy and thick.

But most of our women
Have limbs that appear
Delightfully trim in
Silk hosiery, sheer;
Long skirts? They can't bear 'em,
For work or for sport,
Though Paris may wear 'em,
We're cutting 'em short.

Deep Water

BY ZOE BECKLEY

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

The time had come when JOHN BARRETT, successful business man, decided that all love had vanished during the 10 years of married life with his wife, ANITA. He decided to shake off the tedium of matrimony and tells Anita that he has decided to start life anew with MYRA DEAN, a woman of the world. Myra objects to figuring as corespondent in a divorce suit, but Barrett goes to his old friend. REX WARREN, a lawyer, who at one time was in love with Anita. Warren and Barrett quarrel, but the lawyer decides to see Anita before advising them in regard to the divorce.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

No sooner had Barrett well gone than Rex Warren left his busy law office and went straight to Anita Barrett. The two greeted each other very quietly, with that lack of ostentation that comes of long and deep understanding. Briefly Warren told her of her husband's talk.

Anita turned to stare out of the window. In her stiff attitude was a summoning of resistance to an overwhelming crisis — a woman who has wrapped herself so long in defensive coldness that she no longer knows the relief of giving way to her natural feelings.

"What do you want me to do, Anita? You must tell me where you stand—where we all stand."

Anita tore her hands apart.

"Oh, I don't know, Rex. I don't know. It is all such a muddle, a — vicious circle. We've grown so apart, John and I. I've steeled myself for affair, too."

"Rex!" There was a note of alarm years to keep from showing how his indifference hurt me. Now it's my coldness that makes him hate me. We can't come together again now. It's too late."

"Would you if you could?"

She looked straight at him a moment, her lips trembling.

"I don't think so, Rex. I feel dead inside. But I'm so anxious for the children. I want them to have their father. Yet how can I cling to a man who—hates to stay?"

"You've got to decide. What do you want?" There was much insistence, such grim command in his question, that it aroused superficially a flash of resentment in her.

"Don't bully me into a decision., I—Oh, forgive me, Rex, I didn't mean—"

"Never mind the amenities, Anita. I'm bullying because this is partly my in her tone.

"Oh, Anita, for heaven's sake let's be direct about what we know. The thing I want most on earth is that you should have what you most want. No matter what it is, I'll help you get it. I want to bring happiness to you, Anita. If you decide to let him go, remember I have never changed toward you, never shall."

The feel of support when everything about her was toppling touched her to tears. She put her hand on his shoulder.

"I often feel, Rex, that friendship is more precious than love. It lasts longer, wears better, endures more—"

He reached up for her hand, pressed it in both his and allowed her to draw it away.

"I'm grateful that you feel friendship for me," he said quietly. "But on my side, there is more than that. Remember it, Anita." And he was gone.

Adventures of The Twins

By Olive Roberts Barton

"Here are your glasses, Buskins," called up Nick.

Light Fingers, the bad little fairy who worked for Twelve Toes, the wicked sorcerer, was looking for mischief.

And he found it.

He saw Nancy and Nick start away from the pine-tree where the Green Wizard lived and he knew where they were going.

First they were going to the old apple tree to give the apple tree fairy a pair of smoked glasses the kind wizard had made for him.

Second they were going to the Blueberry Patch to give the fairy landlord a pair of extra-seeing glasses, the kind wizard had made for him.

Light Fingers was tickled to pieces. Here was a chance for him to play a trick.

He slid down the maple sapling where he had been hiding, singing his favorite foolish tune about "dicky-bird in a juniper tree, tum tum, te tum tum, te tum tum!"

"Oh, never was anyone smarter than me!" he went on, tiptoeing after the Twins as softly as he could go.

Suddenly a branch crackled under his foot.

The Twins stopped and looked around quickly. "What was that?" said Nancy. But nobody answered, for nobody was there. Light Fingers was also light-footed and he had scampered behind a thorny bush quick as scat.

So Nancy and Nick went on.

But after them glided a figure as softly and nimbly as a little shadow. It was Light Fingers again.

And mind you, without anyone even knowing it, he changed the packages around in the pockets of the Twins!

Bye 'n' bye they came to the apple tree. "Here are your gasses, Buskins," called up Nick.

Next they delivered Tingaling's package at his house in the Blueberry Patch.

SUBTLTY IN WRAPS HERE

The short woman must have subtlety about her dress.

Heavy bunglesome looking wraps and flat hats do not bring out the best in her personality.

These coats illustrate the point. The sport model gives no distinction to the wearer, but the black one with the panels, collar and cuffs of fur makes a stunning figure of her.

The hat, too, with its high feathers, adds some six inches of deceptive artistry, while the other hat actually subtracts an inch or so, as well as giving a too-round appearance to the face.

LYNCH TENNIS CLUB PRESIDENT CORRECTS STATEMENT

The following letter, written by S. R. Riley, president of the Lynch Tennis Club, to the editor of the Harlan Enterprise, has been sent to the Daily News for publication:

"In your issue of November 18, 1922, you published an unsigned statement as to the standing in the Tennis Tournament between Harlan and Lynch, containing erroneous and misleading statements as to the Lynch tournament team.

"Under your issue of September 29, 1922 you published a statement purporting to come from the Harlan Country Club team stating in effect that they were champions of Harlan county having suffered defeat in only one match.

"I wrote a letter to the Harlan Country Club tennis team and asked for an opportunity to contest their championship. On October 7, 1922, I received a letter from Mr. Lee Wall stating that they would come to Lynch on October 8 to play the Lynch tournament team. They came and were defeated in the match by Lynch, winning 2 sets and Harlan winning one. Liggett also came with Harlan and defeated Lynch by a score of two sets against one. The following Sunday Lynch played at Liggett defeating Liggett 2 sets to 0.

"On October 22 the Lynch tournament team again met Harlan and defeated Harlan by a score of 2 sets to 1. This closed the tournament with Harlan as far as Lynch was concerned as Riley and Stacey, Lynch best team had defeated Ward and Lewis in two consecutive matches [illegible] the score for the tournament standing Lynch 2, Harlan 0. At the conclusion of the match between Lynch and Harlan on Sunday, October 22, Stacey and Todd, the second best team at Lynch's disposal, were pitted against Atkins and Wills and defeated 6-0 and 6-0.

"Thus if this last match was taken into consideration it would still leave Lynch with two matches to her credit and Harlan one match. Likewise humbling the victors of 11 battles and wresting their laurels from them by a score of 2 to 1.

"Lynch will not hold aloof but is willing to allow the representatives of the town of Harlan to try and regain them during the season of 1923 should they desire to do so.

"Very truly yours.

"President Lynch Tennis Club."

LIQUOR SMUGGLING APPALLING MENACE

Speaker Says Huge Army And Navy Required To Enforce Prohibition in U. S.

By Associated Press

Toronto, Canada, Nov. 21.—To stop liquor smuggling across international boundary lines would require a greater navy than the government now possesses and a greater standing army than any had in peace, so long as countries on the othere side of the border are not in sympathy with our national prohibition policy, Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, Westerville, O., secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, declared in an address before the league convention here today.

"In spite of all the intoxicating liquors held in bond in the United States at present, which is more than sufficient for all legitimate requirements for years to come," said the speaker, "the fact remains that during the first eighteen monthsof 1922 there was accepted international imports of 180,000 gallons of whisky and 362,532 quarts of champaigne.

"The single province of Quebec, Canada, on our northeastern border, imported in 1921 more Scotch whisky than had been imported into that province during the entire ten years preceding.

"Estimates have been made to the effect that in the vicinity of Detroit, Michigan, there are smuggled over the Canadian border 1,000 cases of contraband liquors every 24 hours.

"The island of Bimini and Cuba, together with others of the West India group are well known bases of operation for international bootlegging, and the violation of both spirit and the letter of the prohibition law in the United States.

"Already the airship is being employed as an agency for liquor smuggling and when one bears in mind the remarkable progress of aerial navigation during the past five years it does not require a great sweep of the imagination to visualize the possibilities of the use of airships in great numbers for breaking down of prohibitory regulations during the next five years.

"The many new organizations in America for the nullification and repeal of prohibition, are, after all, but a part of the program of the strongly organized international liquor traffic which represents greater wealth and influence than it ever represented as a national institution. So today the future of American prohibition is involved in what is to be the future policy on the liquor question in Canada, Mexico, Japan, England and other nations.

CANADA BUILDS GOOD HIGHWAYS

Dominion Spends $40,000,000 On Road Improvement This Year Alone.

By Associated Press

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 24.—Forty million dollars is being spent on good roads in Canada this year. Highways construction has been carried on on a larger scale this year than ever before and the appropriations for work are the highest on record, according to A. W. Campbell, commissionar of highways.

"Of the total sum spent, $15,000,000 will be used on Federal aided highways, of which $6,000,000 will come out of the Dominion treaury," said Mr. Campbell. "Expenditures being made by the provinces and counties on roads not receiving federal assistance will amount to about $25,000,000."

There are now 1,000 miles of permanent paved road in Canada, or sufficient mileage to extend one-third of the distance between the Atlantic and Pacific coast, according to Mr. Campbell who added that his mileage is being increased as rapidly as possible.

The Dominion government has appropriated $20,000,000 to be used in construction of main highways and market roads, calculated to cover a period of five years. This is divided among the provinces on the basis of population. Under the terms of the grant the provinces carry out the road building, and the government, on approval of the plans, contributes 40 per cent of the cost. This guarantees standardization of roadways and places only 60 per cent expense on the provinces.

Highway improvement has been [illegible]me. pecially rapid in the west, [illegible]ain now rapid development of the gre[illegible] cultural districts by the influ[illegible]" settlers, states Mr. Campbell[illegible]im a mo- ers are doing much of their [illegible] ing with motor trucks and cro[illegible]d feel quickly transported to maret ov[illegible]ns for modern highways.

The Masquerader

CHAPTER V.

FOR the space of a minute there was silence in the room, then outside in the still night three clocks simultaneously chimed eleven, and their announcement was taken up and echoed by half a dozen others, loud and faint, hoarse and resonant, for all through the hours of darkness the neighborhood of Fleet Street is alive with chimes

Chilcote, startled by the jangle, rose from his seat then, as if driven by an uncontrollable impulse, he spoke again

"You probably think I am mad—" he began

Loder took his pipe out of his mouth "Im not so presumptuous" he said quietly

For a space the other eyed him silently as if trying to gauge his thoughts then once more he broke into speech

"Look here he said I came to night to make a proposition. When I have made it you'll first of all jeer at it—as I jeered when I made it to myself; then you'll see its possibilities—as I did, then"—he paused and glanced around the room nervously—"then you'll accept it—as I did" In the uneasy haste of his speech his words broke off almost unintelligibly.

Involuntarily Loder lifted his head to retort, but Chilcote put up his hand His face was set with the obstinate determination that weak men sometimes exhibit

"Before I begin I want to say that I am not drunk—that I am neither mad nor drunk" He looked fully at his companion with his restless glance "I am quite sane—quite reasonable."

Again Loder essayed to speak, but again he put up his hand.

"No Hear me out You told me something of your story I'll tell you something of mine You'll be the first person, man or woman, that I have confided in for ten years You say you have been treated shabbily I have treated myself shabbily—which is harder to reconcile I had every chance—and I chucked every chance away"

There was a strained pause, then again Loder lifted his head

"Morphia?" he said, very quietly.

Chilcote wheeled round with a scared gesture "How did you know that?" he asked sharply

The other smiled "It wasn't guessing—it wasn't even deduction You told me, or as good as told me, in the fog—when we talked of Lexington. You were unstrung that night, and I— Well, perhaps one gets overobservant from living alone" He smiled again

Chilcote collapsed into his former seat and passed his handkerchief across his forehead

Loder watched him for a space; then he spoke "Why don't you pull up?" he said "You are a young man still Why don't you drop the thing before it gets too late?" His face was unsympathetic, and below the question in his voice lay a note of hardness

Chilcote returned his glance The suggestion of reproof had accentuated his pallor Under his excitement he looked ill and worn

"You might talk till doomsday, but every word would be wasted," he said, irritably "I'm past praying for, by something like six years"

"Then why come here?" Loder was pulling hard on his pipe "I'm not a dealer in sympathy"

"I don't require sympathy" Chilcote rose again He was still agitated, but the agitation was quieter "I want a much more expensive thing than sympathy—and I am willing to pay for it"

The other turned and looked at him "I have no possession in the world that would be worth a fiver to you,' he said, coldly "You're either under a delusion or you're wasting my time"

Chilcote laughed nervously "Wait," he said "Wait I only ask you to wait First let me sketch you my position—it won't take many words

"My grandfather was a Chilcote of West Wark he was one of the first of his day and his class to recognize that there was a future in trade, so, breaking his own little twig from the family tree, he went south to Wark and entered a ship owning firm In thirty years' time he died, the owner of one of the biggest trades in England, having married the daughter of his chief My father was twenty four and still at Oxford when he inherited Almost his first act was to reverse my grandfather's early move by going north and piecing together the family friendship He married his first cousin, and then, with the Chilcote prestige revived and the shipping money to back it, he entered on his ambition, which was to represent East Wark in the Conservative interest It was a big fight, but he won—as much by personal influence as by any other He was an aristocrat, but he was a keen business man as well The combination carries weight with your lower classes He never did much in the House, but he was a power to his party in Wark They still use his name there to conjure with"

Loder leaned forward interestedly "Robert Chilcote?" he said "I have heard of him One of those fine, unostentatious figures—strong in action, a little narrow in outlook, perhaps, but essential to a country's staying power. You have every reason to be proud of your father."

Chilcote laughed suddenly. "How easily we sum up, when a matter is impersonal! My father may have been a fine figure, but he shouldn't [illegible] to climb to his pedestal"

Loder's eyes questioned him his newly awakened interest he had let his pipe go out

"Don't you grasp my meaning?" Chilcote went on "My father died and I was elected for East Wark. You may say that if I had no real inclination for the position I could have kicked But I tell you I couldn't Every local interest, political and commercial, hung upon the candidate being a Chilcote I did what eight men out of ten would have done I yielded to pressure"

"It was a fine opening!" The words escaped Loder

"Most prisons have wide gates" Chilcote laughed again unpleasantly "That was six years ago I had started on the morphia tack four years earlier, but up to my father's death I had it under my thumb—or believed I had, and in the realization of my new responsibilities and the excitement of the political fight I almost put it aside For several months after I entered Parliament I worked I believe I made one speech that marked me as a coming man" He laughed derisively "I even married—"

"Married?"

"Yes A girl of nineteen—the ward of a great statesman It was a brilliant marriage—politically as well as socially But it didn't work I was born without the capacity for love First the social life palled on me, then my work grew irksome There was only one factor to make life endurable — morphia Before six months were out I had fully admitted [illegible]"

"But your wife?"

"Oh my wife knew nothing—knows nothing It is the political business the beastly routine of the political life, that is wearing me out" He stopped nervously, then hurried on again "I tell you it's hell to see the same faces, to sit in the same seat day in, day out, knowing all the time that you must hold yourself in hand, must keep your grip on the reins—'

'It is always possible to apply for the Chiltern Hundreds'

"To retire? Possible to retire? Chilcote broke into a loud, sarcastic laugh "You don't know what the local pressure of a place like Wark stands for Twenty times I have been within an ace of chucking the whole thing Once last year I wrote privately to Vale one of our big men there and hinted that my health was bad Two hours after he had read my letter he was in my study Had I been in Greenland the result would have been the same No Resignation is a meaningless word to a man like me.'

Loder looked down "I see, he said slowly, "I see"

"Then you see everything—the difficulty, the isolation of the position Five years ago — three — even two years ago—I was able to endure it, now it gets more unbearable with every month The day is bound to come when—when'—he paused, hesitating nervously—'when it will be physically impossible for me to be at my post"

Loder remained silent

'Physically impossible," Chilcote repeated, excitedly "Until lately I was able to calculate—to count upon myself to some extent, but yesterday I received a shock—yesterday I discovered that—that'—again he hesitated painfully—"that I have passed the stage when one may calculate'

The situation was growing more embarrassing To hide its awkwardness, Loder moved back to the grate and rebuilt the fire, which had fallen low

Chilcote, still excited by his unusual vehemence followed him, taking up a position by the mantel piece

"Well?' he said looking down

Very slowly Loder rose from his task "Well?' he reiterated

"Have you nothing to say?"

"Nothing, except that your story is unique, and that I suppose I am flattered by your confidence" His voice was intentionally brusque

Chilcote paid no attention to the voice Taking a step forward, he laid his fingers on the lapel of Loder's coat

"I have passed the stage where I can count upon myself," he said, "and I want to count upon somebody else. I want to keep my place in the world's eyes and yet be free—"

Loder drew back involuntarily, contempt struggling with bewilderment in his expression

Chilcote lifted his head "By an extraordinary chance," he said, "you can do for me what no other man in creation could do It was suggested to me unconsciously by the story of a book—a book in which men change identities I saw nothing in it at the time, but this morning, as I lay in bed, sick with yesterday's fiasco, it came back to me—it rushed over my mind in an inspiration It will save me—and make you I'm not insulting you, though you may think so"

Without remark Loder freed himself from the other's touch and walked back to his desk. His anger, his pride, and, against his will, his excitement were all aroused.

He sat down, leaned his elbow on the desk, and took his face between his hands The man behind him undoubtedly talked madness, but after five years of dreary sanity madness had a fascination Against all reason it stirred and roused him For one instant his pride and his anger faltered before it, then common sense flowed back again and adjusted the balance.

"You propose," he said slowly, "that for a consideration of money I should trade on the likeness between us—and become your dummy, when you are otherwise engaged?"

Chilcote colored. "You are unpleas-

'But I have caught your meaning?"

"In the rough, yes"

Loder nodded curtly "Then take my advice and go home," he said 'You're unhinged"

The other returned his glance, and as their eyes met Loder was reluctantly compelled to admit that, though the face was disturbed, it had no traces of insanity

"I make you a proposal,' Chilcote repeated, nervously but with distinctness "Do you accept?"

For an instant Loder was at a loss to find a reply sufficiently final Chilcote broke in upon the pause

'After all," he urged, "what I ask of you is a simple thing Merely to carry through my routine duties for a week or two occasionally when I find my endurance giving way—when a respite becomes essential The work would be nothing to a man in your state of mind, the pay anything you like to name' In his eagerness he had followed Loder to the desk "Won't you give me an answer? I told you I am neither mad nor drunk'

Loder pushed back the scattered papers that lay under his arm

Only a lunatic would propose such a scheme he said, brusquely and without feeling

"Why?"

The other's lips parted for a quick retort then in a surprising way the

QUARTERBACK MOST DIFFICULT POSITION

Bo McMillin Tells What Field General Is Up Against In Game.

By Bo McMillin, All American Quarterback.

What is the most difficult positon to play on a football team?

From my playing experience I believe that the quarterback should get the call More depends on the man playing this position He constantly meets with new situations Sometimes he must resort to snap judgment Failure to properly grasp an important situation often means loss of the game

A successful quarterback must first of all be a man who has football brains and be a quick thinker He must be able to size up the situation immediately and at the same time choose the best man in his back field to carry the ball in that particular play

On each eleven there are men who are good blockers on certain plays, while on other plays they would be in the way of the runner Some men might be exceptionally good in leading the interference on an end run and at the same time he would not be able to do this on a line buck

Must Know His Men

The man directing the play must know who are the best blockers, the best passers and the best line plungers All these things have to be taken into consideration when it comes to selecting the play

However, these are not half of the worries of a quarterback He must know the distance from the opponents' goal He must keep track of the score to know whether it is necessary to play an open game or to stay on the defense

Another requirement is a good voice By this I do not mean one that is so loud that it can be heard from one end of the field to the other He must be distinct in giving out his numbers, but does not necessarily have to bellow them out for the benefit of the stands

In our play at Centre we did not call him the quarterback Here it was the field general

The field general, as we will now call him, must be cool headed He must have implicit confidence in the system used by his coach Confidence in himself is also a big factor Unless a man has confidence in his own ability he will not succeed in any line of work

Roberts a Real Star

In going back to the field general's knowledge of the ability of the individual players I will illustrate with Red Roberts of Centre Our team used the material at hand to better advantage than any team I know of You have often read where Red played several different positions in one game In Roberts we had a versatile player who played all positions well Many coaches would have been satisfied with playing Red in one position and letting him stay there But why lose the real value of a player of this type?

His regular place last year was left end When we were to make an attack to the right I would bring Roberts in the back field and shift a right half back to take his place at end Here he would be used to make interference for the runner Oftimes when this was done the opposition would expect a line buck by Red and I would call a forward pass and they would be taken off their feet and a good gain would result.

They are urging this country to admit more foreigners Well, we will admit we have more than enough

SULPHUR IS BEST TO CLEAR UP UGLY, BROKEN OUT SKIN

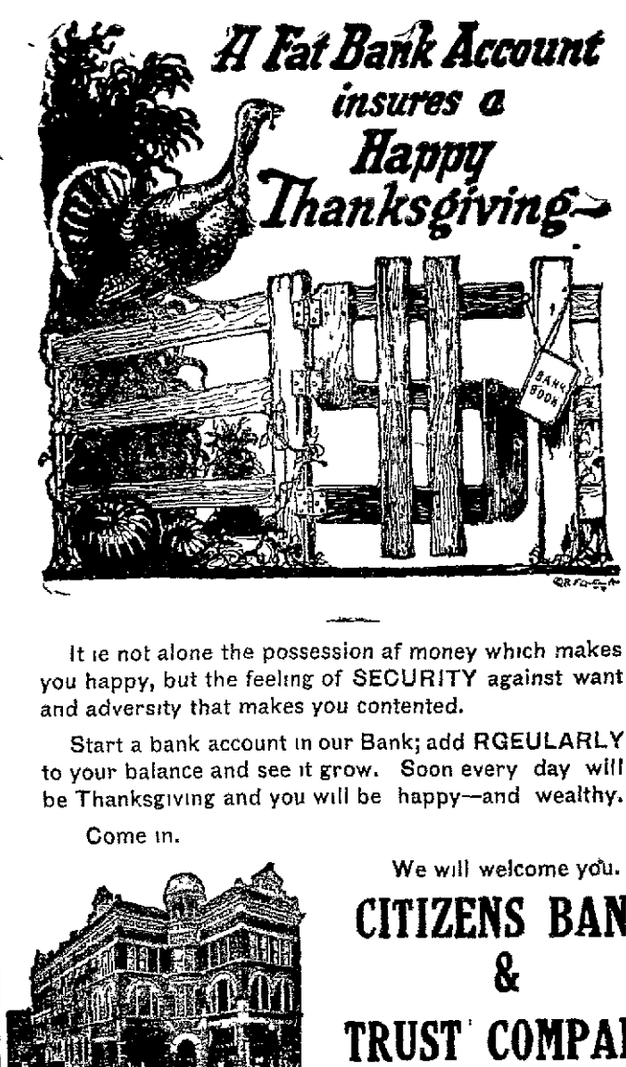
FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.



It is not alone the possession af money which makes you happy, but the feeling of SECURITY against want and adversity that makes you contented.

The following dispatch from Cleveland, Tenn., clipped from Today's Journal and Tribune, comes as a surprise to Middlesboro people who did not know that the Rev. Baldwin contemplated leaving here:

"A call has been extended to Rev. R. D. Baldwin of Middlesboro, Ky., to take charge of the Cleveland parish of the Episcopal church. Dr. Baldwin is here today looking over the situation and probably will accept the call. He will devote a part of the time to the churches at Athens and Etowah.

"Bishop Maxon, coadjutor of the church in Tennessee, was here yesterday, accompanied by Dr. Walter Whitaker, rector of St. John's church in Knoxville and dean of the convocation. They almost missed Dr. Baldwin whose train was late and who finally came in on the evening train. The bishop and Dr. Whitaker left last night, but Rev. Baldwin remained over to consult with the officials of the church here.

"St. Luke's church here has been without a rector since last March, when Rev. Walter Loflin left."

WORLD PROHIBITION CONFERENCE BEGINS

Anti-Alcohol Crusaders, From 22 Countries, 5000 in All Meet in Toronto.

By Associated Press

Toronto, Nov. 23.—A world-wide crusade for prohibition will find expression in Toronto during the next five days for some 5000 delegates have assembled here to hold an anti-alcoholic conference under the auspices of the World League against Alcoholism They have come from no less than 22 different countries, and their purpose is to attain by means of education and legislation, the total suppression thruout the world of alcoholism, which is the poisoning of body, germ-plasm, mind conduct and society produced by the consumption of alcoholic beverages."

Representative of every known force in social reform, temperance organizations, churches, young people's societies, and Sunday schools. The gathering will mark the beginning of a new and intensified campaign against the liquor traffic, and it is expected that it will perfect complete plans for carrying on the international work. While it is being held under the auspices of the World League, the gathering will be five conventions in one —the World prohibition convention. Dominion of Canada prohibition convention, Ontario provincial prohibition convention. the World's Student Federation, and the International Enforcement Convention.

The latter convention will be attended by rfepresentatives of all the provinces of Canada, of the border states, and those particularly affected by rum-running, together with National, Provincial and State enforcement officers with a view to arriving at a mutual understanding that will end the present outrageous border situation.

In reviewing the work of the temperance forces in Canada for the suppression of the liquor traffic to a representative of the Canadian Press. Rev. Ben H. Spence, secretary of the Dominion Temperance Alliance and host of the great convention, expressed his confidence that the object of this organization was nearing its goal. Prohibition in Canada, he said, could never be effective while liquor is legally made and transported in any part of the dominion. National prohibition could not be made safe in any nation while an adjoining nation permitted the traffic, and the campaign must be carried on with renewed vigor and energy until liquor was eradicated in every land and every clime, and the world was made safe against the ravages of alcoholism in every possible form.

"This great movement has been given to us in Canada in trust," said Mr. Spence, "and so far as our experience will be of help to others, we are by our obligations bound to give it. This convention is the biggest thing ever put over in Canada, and the greatest the temperance advocates of the world have ever attempted. We in Canada are particularly proud that this momentous gathering was given to Canada and that Toronto was chosen as the city. It is a great honor to Canada and Toronto. But after all, in the slogan of the league, 'The world is my country, and all mankind my brothers.'"
